

Georgia Press Educational Foundation Billy Watson Internship Program

Student Application

In the last 30 years, Georgia Press Educational Foundation has provided funding for more than 150 newspapers to hire student interns. Today, the program continues to offer eight-week internship grants to newspapers to hire students interested in any phase of newspaper production, including advertising, editorial, circulation/marketing, online publishing and pre-press production.

The internship program provides students with actual newspaper experience while reinforcing their scholastic training with a goal of convincing interns to pursue a career in the newspaper industry. Most interns credit the program with giving them a perspective of the newspaper business that they could not have gleaned from the classroom alone.

Internships are awarded to publications that are members of Georgia Press Association. Newspapers that are awarded internship grants are responsible for the hiring of student interns and may choose from their own candidates or from candidates applying for internships through Georgia Press Educational Foundation.

If you are a student interested in a summer internship at a newspaper, complete this application. Applications are due March 1, 2024. Newspapers that are awarded GPEF grants will be sent the information you include in this application.

IMPORTANT: If you know of a newspaper where you would like to work during the summer of 2024, contact the publisher, editor or other manager of the newspaper now to see if they are a member of Georgia Press Association. If they are, encourage them to apply for an internship grant they they can use to hire an intern. Host newspapers applications are available at the scholarships and internships page on the website of Georgia Press Association at:
